SureView Announces Successful Integration of ioimage Video Analytics

Tampa, Florida September 17, 2009 - SureView Systems, has successfully completed the integration of the ioimage analytics appliances into Immix, the company's automation software platform.

Immix® delivers a single platform to manage video surveillance/CCTV, intrusion and fire alarms, access control, and VoIP audio.

Central stations can now leverage the high performance video analytics of ioimage cameras and encoders to trigger alarms within the Immix platform. The enhancement significantly reduces false alarms as central station operators can more easily separate real security events from false ones.

“The seamless integration of our video analytics with Immix offers a proactive security solution by alerting and sending visual verification of suspicious actions”, said John Whiteman ioimage President Americas. “Our partnership with SureView emphasizes our commitment to providing interoperable intelligent video solutions.”

The Immix integration of ioimage incorporates the bounding boxes for both the alarm event and the live view within the standard Immix operator workstation screen. The bounding boxes deliver a new level of event detection for the operator and allow them to instantly focus on the cause of the alarm.

“Adding ioimage to our integrated products portfolio adds real value for our customers. Immix users are now able to leverage the advanced video analytics of ioimage and offer new, value added service offerings designed to drive down false alarm rates while increasing the overall service level to their end customers” commented Matt Krebs, EVP of Sales for SureView Systems.
